Welcome home.

Gonzaga University's Hemmingson Center is over 167,000 square feet of brand-new contemporary space inspired by YOU, built for YOU, and now – after years of dreaming, planning and development – opening its doors to YOU for the very first time, this fall.

At its core, the Hemmingson Center is an imaginative place reflecting our vision of what it means to support students who attend a premier Jesuit university. Its intentional design showcases the Gonzaga experience with exciting, innovative opportunities to live in community, and meet, learn, discover, and grow in every aspect of your life: mind, body and spirit.

- Ten unique and fun dining areas with a focus on healthy eating
- Places on four massive floors to meet, study and socialize with friends and peers
- Indoor and outdoor decks and vistas for gathering and entertainment
- The new headquarters for student government, clubs and organizations

With a commitment to the well-being of our students, our campus and the environment, the Hemmingson Center is a place to engage and be inspired in a space that supports fun, healthy living and engaged interaction.

The Hemmingson Center will be your “living room” away from home.

The doors will open this August. Please come in!
